The Robinson Center for Young Scholars, a nationally recognized center serving highly capable students, is hosting a conference on student wellness. The conference will be an opportunity to engage the community of students, parents, teachers, and counselors of highly capable students in discussions that illuminate issues of student wellness and to initiate new research in related areas.

The main themes of the conference are:

- Cultivating Wellness - This theme will not only explore the definition, pursuit, and expectation of “wellness”, but also the ways in which “wellness” is shaped by parents, teachers, and peers. Topics for discussion may include anxiety, fear of failure, sexuality, living up to parents’ expectations, making healthy choices and decisions, depression, resiliency, bullying, and gender identity.

- Student Mental Health and Creating a Support Network for Wellness - Sessions focusing on this subtopic will address social, familial, and educational supports that serve highly capable students in elementary, secondary, and post-secondary education.

“Supporting Healthy Scholars”

an Interactive Research Symposium

Co-sponsored with the College of Education School of Psychology

February 8th, 10 AM — 3:30 PM
Husky Union Building (HUB)
Reception, 3:30 PM — 5:00 PM
UW Club

Please RSVP here: tinyurl.com/healthyscholarsRSVP